

Lee Weil is a New York native, and made her living working with horses. She trained Thoroughbred racehorses and worked as an outrider at the 3 major New York tracks. She began fly-fishing in 1981 on Long Island. She served as President for the Long Island Flyrodders, and Retreat Leader for Casting For Recovery. Her work has been featured in Fly Tyer magazine and American Angler, and she is a regular tyer at the International Fly Tying Symposium each year.

She is currently retired and living with her husband Jeff and their horses and 2 German Shorthaired pointers. She enjoys riding, training their dogs, and of course, fishing.